

The Complexity of Identity: “Who Am I?”

Beverly Daniel Tatum

The concept of identity is a complex one, shaped by individual characteristics, family dynamics, historical factors, and social and political contexts. Who am I? The answer depends in large part on who the world around me says I am. Who do my parents say I am? Who do my peers say I am? What message is reflected back to me in the faces and voices of my teachers, my neighbors, store clerks? What do I learn from the media about myself? How am I represented in the cultural images around me? Or am I missing from the picture altogether? As social scientist Charles Cooley pointed out long ago, other people are the mirror in which we see ourselves.¹

This “looking glass self” is not a flat one-dimensional reflection, but multidimensional. How one’s racial identity is experienced will be mediated by other dimensions of one-self: male or female; young or old; wealthy, middle-class, or poor; gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender, or heterosexual; able-bodied or with disabilities; Christian, Muslim, Jewish, Buddhist, Hindu, or atheist. ...

What has my social context been? Was I surrounded by people like myself, or was I part of a minority in my community? Did I grow up speaking standard English at home or another language or dialect? Did I live in a rural county, an urban neighborhood, a sprawling suburb, or on a reservation?

Who I am (or say I am) is a product of these and many other factors. Erik Erikson, the psychoanalytic theorist who coined the term identity crisis, introduced the notion that the social, cultural, and historical context is the ground in which individual identity is embedded. Acknowledging the complexity of identity as a concept, Erikson writes,

We deal with a process “located” in the core of the individual and yet also in the core of his communal culture.... In psychological terms, identity formation employs a process of simultaneous reflection and observation, a process taking place on all levels of mental functioning, by which the individual judges himself in the light of what he perceives to be the way in which others judge him in comparison to themselves and to a typology significant to them.²

Triggered by the biological changes associated with puberty, the maturation of cognitive abilities, and changing societal expectations, this process of simultaneous reflection and observation, the self-creation of one’s identity, is commonly experienced in the United States and other Western societies during the period of adolescence.³ Though the foundation of identity is laid in the experiences of childhood, younger children lack the physical and cognitive development needed to reflect on the self in this abstract way. The adolescent capacity for self-reflection (and resulting self-consciousness) allows one to ask, “Who am I now?” “Who was I before?” “Who will I become?” The answers to these questions will influence choices about who one’s romantic partners will be, what type of work one will do, where one will live, and what belief system one will embrace. Choices made in adolescence ripple throughout the lifespan.

Colonial Intervention and Destabilization of African Identities Obed Mfum-Mensah, 2025-02-01 External forces and African elites impose trusteeship practices on Africans to construct and consolidate hierarchical power relations in African societies that infantilize Africans They employ trusteeship and organized infantilism as two pronged colonial intervention tools to keep the masses of Africans in subordinated positions by accepting and internalizing those practices as part of the normal order of things This book takes an interdisciplinary approach for examining these different forms of power relations that exploit and dispossess African societies of their resources to accumulate their own wealth Teaching and Learning in a Multilingual School Tara Goldstein, Gordon Pon, Timothy Chiu, Judith Ngan, 2003-01-30 In depth portrayal and discussion of dilemmas choices and risks teachers and students must negotiate in a multilingual school Based on a Canadian study but applicable for all teachers working with linguistically and culturally diverse students Resources in Education ,1998-10 Teaching for Diversity and Social Justice Maurianne Adams, Lee Anne Bell, Pat Griffin, 1997 A sourcebook that addresses the need to facilitate communication and understanding between members of diverse social groups providing a framework in which students can engage and critically analyze several forms of social oppression Campus Counterspaces Micere Keels, 2020-01-15 Frustrated with the flood of news articles and opinion pieces that were skeptical of minority students imagined campus microaggressions Micere Keels a professor of comparative human development set out to provide a detailed account of how racial ethnic identity structures Black and Latinx students college transition experiences Tracking a cohort of more than five hundred Black and Latinx students since they enrolled at five historically white colleges and universities in the fall of 2013 Campus Counterspaces finds that these students were not asking to be protected from new ideas Instead they relished exposure to new ideas wanted to be intellectually challenged and wanted to grow However Keels argues they were asking for access to counterspaces safe spaces that enable radical growth They wanted counterspaces where they could go beyond basic conversations about whether racism and discrimination still exist They wanted time in counterspaces with likeminded others where they could simultaneously validate and challenge stereotypical representations of their marginalized identities and develop new counter narratives of those identities In this critique of how universities have responded to the challenges these students face Keels offers a way forward that goes beyond making diversity statements to taking diversity actions Schooling for Critical Consciousness Scott Seider, Daren Graves, 2020-08-26 Schooling for Critical Consciousness addresses how schools can help Black and Latinx youth resist the negative effects of racial injustice and challenge its root causes Scott Seider and Daren Graves draw on a four year longitudinal study examining how five different mission driven urban high schools foster critical consciousness among their students The book presents vivid portraits of the schools as they implement various programs and practices and traces the impact of these approaches on the students themselves The authors make a unique contribution to the existing scholarship on critical consciousness and culturally responsive teaching by comparing the roles of different schooling models in fostering various dimensions of critical consciousness and identifying specific programming and practices that contributed to this work Through their research with more than 300 hundred students of color Seider and Graves aim to help educators strengthen their capacity to support young people in learning to analyze navigate and challenge racial injustice Schooling for Critical Consciousness provides school leaders and educators with specific programming and practices they can incorporate into their own school contexts to support the critical consciousness
