The book presents a range of theoretical and practical approaches to the teaching of the twin professions of interpreting and translating covering a variety of language pairs. All aspects of the training process are addressed from detailed word level processing to student concerns with their careers and from the setting of examinations to the standardisation of marking. The articles show very clearly the strengths and needs, the potential and vision of interpreter and translator training as it exists in countries around the world. The experience of the authors who are all actively engaged in training interpreters and translators demonstrates the innovative practical and reflective approaches which are proving invaluable in the formation of the next generation of professional translators and interpreters. While many of them are being trained in universities they are being prepared for a life in the real world of business and politics through the use of authentic texts and tools and up to date methodology.

Event Structure Metaphors through the Body Daniel R. Roush, 2018-06-15 How do the experiences of people who have different bodies deaf versus hearing shape their thoughts and metaphors? Do different linguistic modes of expression signed versus spoken have a shaping force as well? This book investigates the metaphorical production of culturally Deaf translators who work from English to American Sign Language ASL. It describes how Event Structure Metaphors are handled across languages of two different modalities. Through the use of corpus based evidence several specific questions are addressed: are the main branches of Event Structure Metaphors the Location and Object branches exhibited in ASL? Are these two branches adequate to explain the event related linguistic metaphors identified in the translation corpus? To what extent do translators maintain, shift, add and omit expressions of these metaphors? While answering these specific questions, this book makes a significant elaboration to the two branch theory of Event Structure Metaphors. It raises larger questions of how bilinguals handle competing conceptualizations of events and contributes to emerging interest in how body specificity, linguistic modes and cultural context affect metaphoric variability.

Translation and Web Localization Miguel A. Jimenez-Crespo, 2013-11-07 Web localization is a cognitive textual communicative and technological process by which interactive web texts are modified to be used by audiences in different sociolinguistic contexts. Translation and Web Localization provides an in depth and comprehensive overview into this emerging field of study. The book covers the key areas and main theoretical and practical approaches of the subject rather than a step by step practical guide. Topics covered include the often controversial definition of localization, how the process develops, what constitutes a text in this process, digital genre theory and its implications and how to conduct research or training in this field. The book concludes with a look into the dynamic nature of web localization and the forces such as crowdsourcing that are reshaping web localization and translation as we know it. In light of the deep changes brought by the Internet, Translation and Web Localization is an indispensable book for researchers, postgraduate and advanced undergraduate students of translation studies as well as practitioners and researchers in related fields such as computational linguistics, applied linguistics, Internet linguistics, digital genre theory and web development.

From Topic Boundaries to Omission Melanie Metzger, 2003 This first volume in the Studies in Interpretation series studies several facets of signed language interpreting such as conference courtroom and medical interpretation the interaction between Deaf presenters and audiences and the non manual elements used by interpreters in sign language transliteration
