Travel and Transformation Dr Emma Waterton, Dr Garth Lean, Dr Russell Staiff, 2014-08-28 Travel and tourism have a long association with the notion of transformation both in terms of self and social collectives What is surprising however is that this association has on the whole remained relatively underexplored and unchallenged with little in the way of a corpus of academic literature surrounding these themes Instead much of the literature to date has focused upon describing and categorising tourism and travel experiences from a supply side perspective with travellers themselves defined in terms of their motivations and interests While the tourism field can lay claim to several significant milestone contributions there have been few recent attempts at a rigorous re theorization of the issues arising from the travel transformation nexus The opportunity to explore the socio cultural dimensions of transformation through travel has thus far been missed Bringing together geographers sociologists cultural researchers philosophers anthropologists visual researchers literary scholars and heritage researchers this volume explores what it means to transform through travel in a modern mobile world In doing so it draws upon a wide variety of traveller perspectives including tourists backpackers lifestyle travellers migrants refugees nomads walkers writers poets virtual travellers and cosmetic surgery patients to unpack a cultural phenomenon that has captured the imagination since the very first works of Western literature

Second homes the cottage the summer house the bach are an important part of the tourism and leisure lifestyles of many people in the developed world Second homes are therefore an integral component of tourism experiences in rural and peripheral areas Yet despite their significance not only for tourism but also for rural communities and the rural economy relatively little research has been undertaken on the topic until recent times This volume represents the first major international analysis and review of second homes for over 25 years It will provide a significant resource for those interested in changing patterns of tourism and leisure behaviour as well as the use of the countryside and peripheral areas The book describes the economic social and environmental impacts of second homes as well as their planning implications and places such discussions within the context of contemporary human mobility The volume represents essential reading for those interested in rural regional development processes and the development of new rural leisure landscapes
