Comparative Bureaucratic Systems Krishna K. Tummala, 2003-06-04 In today's politically and economically complex and interdependent world scholars, professional administrators and laypersons alike increasingly recognize the importance of bureaucracies. In this timely volume contributors with demonstrated expertise in a range of geographical areas advance our understanding of public administration worldwide through extensive research and incisive analysis. Covering the public sector both in more and less developed nations, this book sheds new light on the means by which the fourth branch of government can be made both effective and well suited to the local culture. This collection is a valuable resource for scholars of public administration and political science as well as for professional administrators in the United States and abroad.

Impossible Jobs in Public Management Erwin C. Hargrove, John C. Glidewell, 1990 If you think your job is hopelessly difficult, you may be right. Particularly if your job is public administration. Those who study or practice public management know full well the difficulties faced by administrators of complex bureaucratic systems. What they don't know is why some jobs in the public sector are harder than others and how good managers cope with those jobs. Drawing on leadership theory and social psychology, Erwin Hargrove and John Glidewell provide the first systematic analysis of the factors that determine the inherent difficulty of public management jobs and of the coping strategies employed by successful managers. To test their argument, Hargrove and Glidewell focus on those jobs fraught with extreme difficulties: impossible jobs. What differentiates impossible from possible jobs are 1) the publicly perceived legitimacy of the commissioner's clientele, 2) the intensity of the conflict among the agency's constituencies, 3) the public's confidence in the authority of the commissioner's profession, and 4) the strength of the agency's myth or long-term idealistic goal. Hargrove and Glidewell flesh out their analysis with six case studies that focus on the roles played by leaders of specific agencies. Each essay summarizes the institutional strengths and weaknesses, specifies what makes the job impossible, and then compares the skills and strategies that incumbents have employed in coping with such jobs. Readers will come away with a thorough understanding of the conflicting social, psychological, and political forces that act on commissioners in impossible jobs.

Corruption & Politics in Latin America Stephen D. Morris, Charles H. Blake, 2010 This text provides a comparative look at corruption within Latin America. Through case study topics, the levels of corruption, how democratic rule is affected, how it contributes to poverty and inequality, and the level of citizen reaction are all discussed. The authors also seek to provide the basic tools needed to understand this emerging subfield and to incorporate a basic knowledge of corruption into a broader understanding of Latin American politics.
