Embodied Communication in Humans and Machines Ipke

Wachsmuth, Manuela Lenzen, Günther Knoblich, 2008-09-04 When people communicate face to face they don't just exchange verbal information. Rather, communication encompasses the whole body. Communication partners synchronize their body sway and mimic or imitate each other's body postures and actions. They produce a multitude of manual and facial gestures that help to illustrate what is being said, show how communication partners feel or reveal verbal deception. Moreover, face-to-face communication takes place in shared contexts where partners jointly attend and refer to the same objects often while working on joint tasks such as carrying a table or repairing a car together. Traditionally, communication research has neglected these parts of communication, using the engineering model of signal transmission as the main theoretical metaphor. This book takes a new look at recent empirical findings in the cognitive and neurosciences, showing that the traditional approach is insufficient and presenting a new interdisciplinary perspective: the Embodied Communication perspective. The core claim of the Embodied Communication perspective is that human communication involves parallel and highly interactive couplings between communication partners. These couplings range from low-level systems for performing and understanding instrumental actions like the mirror system to higher systems that interpret symbols in a cultural context. The book can also serve as a guide for engineers who construct artificial agents and robots that should be able to interact with humans.

Persuasion in Specialised Discourses Olga Dontcheva-Navratilova, Martin Adam, Renata Povolná, Radek

Vogel, 2020-12-10 This book examines the concept of persuasion in written texts for specialist audiences in the English and Czech languages. By exploring a corpus of academic research articles, corporate reports, religious sermons, and user manuals, the authors aim to reveal similarities and differences in rhetorical strategies across cultures and genres. They draw on Biber and Conrad's 2009 model for contextualising interaction in specialised discourses, Bell's 1997 framework for the analysis of participants' roles, Swales' 1990 genre analysis approach for considering genre constraints, and Hyland's 2005 metadiscourse model for investigating writer-reader interaction. The result is a book which will appeal to researchers and students in Discourse Studies, especially those with an interest in genre and rhetorical strategies.

The Elements of Persuasion William A. Covino, 1998 Ninth in the Elements of Composition series The Elements of Persuasion is a brief and inexpensive alternative to longer standard texts. The book provides students with a concise introduction to major theories of persuasion, analysis of political, cultural, and literary events that represent the significance and scope of persuasion, and a range of questions and exercises to develop critical reading and writing skills. An introductory chapter offers a general overview of persuasion, illustrating the contributions of Aristotle's Rhetoric, J. L. Austin's speech act theory, and Kenneth Burke's dramatism with current examples from political oratory, advertising, and hypothetical situations, as well as extensive analysis of the dramatism of the O. J. Simpson trial. With this foundation, students are then able to begin their own analysis of persuasion in public discourse and to assess the elements of persuasion in their own writing.

Power Persuasion Martha Cooper, William L. Nothstine, 1997 Adolescent Literacy and Differentiated Instruction Barbara King-Shaver, Alyce Hunter, 2009. Quite simply, I would love to have had Adolescent Literacy and Differentiated Instruction as a secondary language arts teacher. The book makes me itch to go back to my secondary classroom to see how I could use contemporary technologies as vehicles for differentiation. Carol Ann Tomlinson. As a secondary teacher, Adolescent Literacy and Differentiated Instruction shows you how to effectively respond to the growing crisis in adolescent literacy. It's the first book that shows how to base lessons on students' strengths and target back up instruction to their needs so they can improve in literacy, master content, and meet the demands of higher-level learning. In Adolescent Literacy and Differentiated Instruction, Barbara King Shaver and Alyce Hunter summon the latest research and share effective, essential differentiation practices. With more than 30 replicable models and practical ideas for managing differentiated classrooms, King Shaver and Hunter help you assess students' individual needs, interests, and learning styles, turn assessment into doable plans for targeted instruction, implement dynamic differentiation strategies such as stations, flexible grouping, choice, and anchor activities. Drawing on NCTE's guidelines for promoting adolescent literacy, King Shaver and Hunter offer suggestions for teaching not only reading, writing, listening, and speaking but also viewing multimedia texts and engaging with digital literacy. Read Adolescent Literacy and Differentiated Instruction, use its study guide with colleagues, and discover that with adolescent literacy, the best way to make a difference is by embracing difference. Arguing in Communities: Instructor's Manual Gary L. Hatch, 1999. This text is aimed at students of argumentative writing, emphasizing that arguing is an essential part of living with others.
