Insect Viruses Karl Maramorosch, 2013-04-09 This volume contains seven chapters based on papers presented at a Symposium on Insect Viruses held in conjunction with the 67th Annual Meeting of the American Society for Microbiology in New York N Y on 30 April 4 May 1967 The Symposium was organized to bring together outstanding workers interested in various areas of insect virology and allow an opportunity for a discussion of problems approaches and methods that would lead to further progress in basic and applied research One of the principal reasons for holding the Symposium at this time was the feeling that the divergent areas of research up to now studied separately by entomologists medical and public health workers geneticists and plant pathologists would be brought together crossing the artificial borders and finding new exciting and inspiring vistas Insect viruses provide a rare opportunity to get acquainted with the work and methods of investigators in such related and yet distant fields Following the symposium a decision was made to publish the papers in a single volume extending the contents to provide a complete and scholarly review of each subject Since viruses affecting insects have received little attention until recent years it was felt that a fully documented presentation of diverse areas of insect virology merited publication The invited authors all recognized authorities in their respective fields prepared their contributions in such a way that each is a concise unit crambe are the most important oilseed crops in the world Canola is the second largest oilseed crop in the world providing 13% of the world's supply Seeds of these species commonly contain 40% or more oil and produce meals with 35 to 40% protein However its production has declined significantly in recent years due to insect pest problems The canola pest complexes are responsible for high insecticide applications on canola Many growers rely on calendar based spraying schedules for insecticide applications The diamondback moth Plutella xylostella and flea beetles Phyllotreta spp P. cruciferae and P. striolata cause serious damage to canola In the Northern Great Plains USA for instance P. xylostella is now recorded everywhere that canola is grown Severe damage to canola plants can be caused by overwintering populations of flea beetles feeding on newly emerged seedlings Cabbage seed pod weevil Ceutorhynchus obstrictus swede midge Contarinia nasturtii and tarnished plant bug Lygus lineolaris are also severe pests on canola Minor pests include aphids cabbage aphid Brevicoryne brassicae and turnip aphid Hyadaphis erysimi and grasshopper Melanoplus sanguinipes
