Manuel F. Silva, Mohammad Osman Tokhi, Maria Isabel A. Ferreira, Benedita Malheiro, Pedro Guedes, Paulo Ferreira, Maria Teresa Costa, 2025-10-25 Robotics and Artificial Intelligence hold the potential of significantly augmenting human cognitive and physical performance giving light speed and extreme accuracy to human systems and processes contributing to overcome some of the most complex challenges that humankind faces nowadays But intelligent technologies also pose high risks to human safety autonomy and dignity and they can also negatively impact the environment affecting and even threatening the planet's sustainability and the life of other species By questioning the ontological status of intelligent tools this book analyzes their level of efficiency and ethical performance across distinct domains and settings highlighting the role of standardisation certification and governance in the production and deployment of beneficial intelligent systems The present book is a fundamental reading both to academia and industry i.e. to all those involved in the design production and safe and ethical deployment of intelligent technologies Succeeding in Literature Reviews and Research Project Plans for Nursing Students Graham R. Williamson, Andrew Whittaker, 2019-11-04 Now in its fourth edition and thoroughly updated to ensure all content is mapped to the new 2018 NMC standards this book is a practical and readable guide to undertaking a research project plan or a literature review for final year assessment The book guides readers from start to finish beginning with choosing a nursing topic and developing questions about it then accessing and critically reviewing research literature considering ethical issues proposing research where applicable and finally writing up and completing the literature review or research proposal The authors also explore how to translate evidence into practice and how this can improve day to day decision making as well as feeding into assessments

A Theory of Legal Punishment Matthew Altman, 2021-05-05 This book argues for a mixed theory of legal punishment that treats both crime reduction and retribution as important aims of the state A central question in the philosophy of law is why the state's punishment of its own citizens is justified Traditionally two theories of punishment have dominated the field consequentialism and retributivism According to consequentialism punishment is justified when it maximizes positive outcomes According to retributivism criminals should be punished because they deserve it This book recognizes the strength of both positions According to the two tiered model the institution of punishment and statutory penalties as set by the legislature are justified based on their costs and benefits in terms of deterrence and rehabilitation The law exists to preserve the public order Criminal courts by contrast determine who is punished and how much based on what offenders deserve The courts express the community's collective sense of resentment at being wronged This book supports the two tiered model by showing that it accords with our moral intuitions commonly held compatibilist theories of freedom and assumptions about how the extent of our knowledge affects our obligations It engages classic and contemporary work in the philosophy of law and explains the theory's advantages over competing approaches from retributivists and other mixed theorists The book also defends consequentialism against a longstanding objection that the social sciences give us little guidance regarding which policies to adopt Drawing on recent criminological research the two tiered model can help us to address some of our most pressing social issues including the death penalty drug policy and mass incarceration This book will be of interest to philosophers legal scholars policymakers and social scientists especially criminologists economists and political scientists
