A "Blue Marble" in the infinite black space, we call it Earth. It is fully filled with diverse unique creatures on its surface and even in the deepest part of the ocean. All these living things are different in shape and size, starting from giant blue whale to plants to humans and to bacteria. Despite differences, they all share one common unit, which is called a "CELL". Human life starts with the random fusion of two cells from the paternal and maternal side, and then a single cell expands to multi-billion and trillion cellular organism. This single cell is the carrier of all hereditary information, which then forms all of the 1013 cells in our entire body. Even though all cells have the same genetic data, they are all different with their activity, chemical composition, functionality and response to each other, but together shape one whole organism and maintain life to its end. This truly amazing fundamental unit of life has been explained genuinely with its functions in the thousand pages of the Molecular Biology of the Cell (MBoC) through the past twenty-plus years.

MBoC is known among researchers in life science as the bible of the cell biology and is widely used in advanced courses both at the undergraduate and graduate level, being considered as a reference in many libraries and laboratories around the world. The book was first published in 1983 by Garland Science and subsequently the 2nd edition in 1989, 3rd edition in 1994, 4th edition in 2002, 5th edition in 2008, and the latest 6th edition was published in 2015.

Alongside each new edition authors try to include novel discoveries in cell biology. They have mentioned it in their preface as "With each edition of this book, we marvel at the new information that cell biologists have gathered in just a few years." Since the 5th edition of the book appeared, more than five million of scientific papers have been published along with multitudinous digital data on new genome sequences and technological innovations. In this edition the authors have added newly discovered functions for RNA molecules such as the roles of small and long noncoding RNAs as well as the bacterial CRISPR system; the latest findings on the structure and function of the human genome; new methods to visualize subcellular structures and
