Noblit, William T. Pink, 2015-11-17 This volume will introduce the readers to an alternative nexus of education equity and economy pointing to economies and educations that promote a less stratified and exploitive world and as the chapter authors demonstrate this view has a wide range of applications from technology mathematics to environmental catastrophes and indigenous cultures This first volume in the new book series not only introduces the series itself but also several authors whose chapters that appear here presage the in depth analysis that will be offered by their volumes in the series Education is invoked repeatedly in the class warfare that pits the population against the elites as the investment that makes the difference in terms of both policy and individual commitment in the economy The economy in this scenario is competitive accumulative exploitive and stratifying implying education should mirror this and prepare people to fit this economy However education has other historic goals of developing common cultures national identities and civic engagement that belie this form of economic determinism This volume and the series will explore this new nexus of economy and education with equity

Equity for the 21st Century George H. Sheldon, 2000

This paper explores how the education system of the 21st century has reached its current state and discusses where it needs to go noting that the depth and quality of the education system reflects the wellness of the society The goal that schools districts parents and governments are attempting to achieve is one of equity for all students If equity in education is limited this limits the potential forward progress of each individual and of society The paper examines the history of federal law related to educational equality and opportunity since the Civil War It also looks at legislation passed by Texas courts and how it was influenced by federal legislation regarding the funding of education The paper concludes that to truly provide an equitable system of education three areas must be made as equitable as possible funding curriculum alignment with assessment instruments and teacher commitment to providing each child with an equitable education Contains 12 references Sm Educational Equity M. Smith,2019 Drawing on decades of research policy and practice Jennifer A O Day and Marshall S Smith show how strategies for pursuing educational quality and equal outcomes for all students can be linked presenting an ambitious idea of the future of American education and a comprehensive theory of change for enacting that vision The authors argue that systemic causes require systemic solutions Analyzing the failures of past efforts to address and remedy systemic inequality O Day and Smith maintain that our current standards based policy framework needs to be connected to a continuous improvement approach to build on and scale up successes and to address gaps in outcomes They emphasize the value of focusing on a small set of high leverage issues that are particularly salient for underserved students and they call for deeper coordination between schools and community based organizations to mobilize a coherent response to in school and out of school inequities The authors outline a change strategy that incorporates a balance of pressure and support from three sources government and administrative policy professional accountability and networking and collective engagement of parents and other stakeholders The authors combine discussion of research with examples of promising practices and progress in school systems across the country and offer opportunities for readers to begin and sustain improvement efforts Equity in Education W.
