Entertaining Judgment Greg Garrett, 2015 Nowadays references to the afterlife—angels strumming harps, demons brandishing pitchforks, God enthroned on heavenly clouds—are more often encountered in New Yorker cartoons than in serious Christian theological reflection. Speculation about death and its sequel seems to embarrass many theologians; however, as Greg Garrett shows in Entertaining Judgment, popular culture in the U.S. has found rich ground for creative expression in the search for answers to the question: What lies in store for us after we die? The lyrics of Madonna's "Lonely Boys" and Sean Combs' "The Plotlines of TV's Lost South Park" and The Walking Dead; the implied theology in films such as The Dark Knight, Ghost, and Field of Dreams; the heavenly half-light of Thomas Kinkadee's popular paintings; the ghosts, shades, and afterlife way stations in Harry Potter; and the characters' situations and locations in the Hunger Games saga all speak to our hopes and fears about what comes next. In a rich survey of literature and popular media, Garrett compares cultural accounts of death and the afterlife with those found in scripture. Denizens of the imagined afterlife—whether in heaven, hell, on earth, or in purgatory—speak to what awaits us at once shaping and reflecting our deeply held, if often somewhat nebulous, beliefs. They show us what rewards and punishments we might expect; offer us divine assistance; and even diabolically attack us. Ultimately, we are drawn to these stories of heaven, hell, and purgatory, and to stories about death and the undead, not only because they entertain us, but because they help us to create meaning and to learn about ourselves, our world, and perhaps the next world. Garrett's deft analysis sheds new light on what popular culture can tell us about the startlingly sharp divide between what modern people profess to believe and what they truly hope and expect to find after death, and how they use those stories to help them understand this life.
