

A comparative analysis of cotton and hemp production in Australia

Journal Pre-proof

The Australian cotton and hemp industries are both significant contributors to the country's agricultural sector. Cotton is a major export, while hemp is a growing industry with potential for expansion. This paper compares the production of these two crops in Australia, focusing on the challenges and opportunities for each. The cotton industry has a long history in Australia, with production concentrated in the Murray-Darling basin. However, the industry has faced significant challenges in recent years, including drought and water scarcity. Hemp, on the other hand, is a relatively new crop in Australia, but it has gained attention for its potential in a range of applications, from textiles to food. This paper examines the current state of both industries and discusses the factors that will determine their future success.

Precision Agriculture: Technology and Economic Perspectives Søren Marcus Pedersen, Kim Martin Lind, 2017-11-15 This book presents cases from different countries with a main focus on the perspectives of using precision farming in Europe Divided into 12 chapters it addresses some of the most recent developments and aspects of precision farming The intention of this book is to provide an overview of some of the most promising technologies with precision agriculture from an economic point of view Each chapter has been put together so that it can be read individually should the reader wish to focus on one particular topic Precision Farming as a farm technology benefits from large scale advantages due to relatively high investment costs and is primarily adopted on farms with medium to large field areas

Impact of Agricultural Practices on Biodiversity of Soil Invertebrates Stefano Bocchi, Francesca Orlando, 2021-01-06 Soil fauna plays a key role in many soil functions such as organic matter decomposition humus formation and nutrient release modifying soil structure and improving its fertility Soil invertebrates play key roles in determining soil suitability for agricultural production and realizing sustainable farming systems They include an enormous diversity of arthropods nematodes and earthworms However this fauna suffers from the impact of agricultural activities with implications for the capacity of soil to maintain its fertility and provide ecosystem services Some agricultural practices may create crucial soil habitat changes with consequences for invertebrate biodiversity In the few last decades especially under intensive and specialized farming systems a loss in soil ecosystem services has been observed as a result of the reduction in both the abundance and taxonomic diversity of soil faunal communities On the other hand agricultural practices based on sustainable soil management can promote useful soil fauna Therefore the concerns about the sensibility of soil biota to the agricultural practices make it urgent to develop sustainable management strategies able to realize favorable microclimate and habitats and reduce the soil disturbance Australian Journal of Soil Research ,1999 Agriculture and Human Values ,1998
