Assessing English-medium instruction in German grammar schools Karina Gentgen, 2012-06-01 Bachelor Thesis from the year 2010 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Linguistics grade 1.0 Justus Liebig University Giessen Language Literature and Culture language English abstract English is everywhere Not only is it the language of science the internet and advertisement for instance but it is the lingua franca that allows communication all over the world Thanks to globalization the increasing importance of the media the changing lifestyles of the younger generations as well as the coalescing Europe we cannot evade its impact Not unnaturally the English language has always been and still is a vital part of the German educational system with a tendency to expand its influence throughout the next years Ever since it has been introduced as a foreign language to German schools new concepts and methods to improve foreign language teaching have evolved Bilingual education is one of those concepts Being used in many countries and educational contexts to enhance second language learning it has also found its way into German school types As a method of instruction that involves a higher number of classes held in English per week and additionally other subjects being taught to a greater extent in that foreign language than in traditional educational programs it was introduced developed and often criticized Due to its success the demand for this more intense form of second language learning has increased and more researchers have investigated the outcomes of bilingual education Is such a program beneficial to children or does it have negative consequences on their overall performance at school Would a higher number of English classes per week be sufficient or do other subjects have to be taught in English and above all what subjects should that be without risking the students to have problems understanding their content And finally do students in bilingual programs have a higher language competence than students in comparable traditional English programs These are all questions that are connected to the research on bilingual programs and what factors contribute to their success or what points to their weaknesses The last of the three questions emphasizes the aspect of bilingual education that will be the focus of this bachelor s thesis namely language competence Due to the fact that an assessment of the actual language competence could not be conducted in the given time period the center of this investigation will be the subjective point of view of teachers and students thus a self assessment based on the categories of the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages

Bachelor Thesis from the year 2017 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Linguistics grade 2.0 University of Mannheim language English abstract In this thesis the accuracy of the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages CEFR is explored with the help of a study investigating the German L2 morphosyntactic competence of 15 English L1 speakers in two settings a language assessment test setting as well as in online processing Within this thesis L2 morphosyntactic competence was limited to the two investigated areas of subject verb agreement SVA as well as the distinctive verb placement in German main and subordinate clauses Previous research has identified these two linguistic areas as being especially prone to error in adult L2 acquisition of German Since all test takers varied in their German language proficiency levels encompassing a range from A2 to B2 according to the CEFR it was hypothesised that L2 learners of a B2 language proficiency level generally outperform L2 learners of a lower language proficiency level B1 and A2 in all investigated areas However this hypothesis could not be affirmed since the study did not find significant differences in the morphosyntactic competence of English German L2 learners between test takers of distinctive CEF language proficiency levels
