Brazil's Northeast in particular suffered from a severe drought period from 2012 onwards. Management and governance of natural resources faced serious challenges related to access to water. Important long-term drivers that call for recurrent adaptation of actions are land use change, population growth, climate change, and conflicts from the multiple uses of water. The scientific project addressed this complex situation through research aimed at suggesting practices and pathways towards ecologically and socioeconomically sound management of land, water, and biodiversity. The INNOVATE project had one focus on the entire watershed of the São Francisco River and another one on a portion of the watershed, the Itaparica Reservoir, and the semi-arid area north of the artificial lake. Researchers with different backgrounds worked within their disciplines in groups, interdisciplinary and together with stakeholders, transdisciplinary. The Guidance Manual is a compilation of actor-relevant content extracted from the scientific research results. Most recommendations put forward can be adapted as principles and standards for reservoir and semi-arid regions elsewhere in the world. INNOVATE was an extensive bi-national joint research project between Brazil and Germany with a core period from January 2012 to December 2016. In 2012, a particularly severe drought period began, which not only affected the already dry Northeast of Brazil but also other parts of the country. The severely restricted water availability became a central theme of management and governance of natural resources. Important long-term drivers, which make a continuous adaptation of action necessary, are land use changes, population growth, climate change, and conflicts over the various uses of water. In the project, practices and approaches for the ecological and socioeconomically sustainable management of water, land, and biodiversity were developed. The study area of the INNOVATE project included the entire São Francisco River basin, where field research in the semi-arid surroundings of the Itaparica Reservoir took place. Researchers from various disciplines worked in interdisciplinary groups as well as jointly with stakeholders, transdisciplinary. The present handbook is a compilation of stakeholder-relevant recommendations derived from the scientific research results. The majority of the presented action recommendations can be adapted worldwide to comparable reservoir and semi-arid regions. Aquaponics Stacey Trenler, 2015-07-07 Create Your Own Aquaponics System Today Learn everything you need to know about creating your own aquaponics system at home.
