

Distributed Narrative: Telling Stories Across Networks

Introduction

Until recently, narratives have been constructed to achieve unity. While postmodern narratives open out into fragments and bricolage in content, plot and style, distributed narratives take this further, opening up the formal and physical aspects of the work and spreading themselves across time, space and the network. You see your first fragments of Implementation on stickers posted on signposts on your way to work and find the rest online when you google a remembered sentence. Surrender Control sends you text messages regardless of where you are or what you're doing. You read Online Caroline and Blue Company in a series of emails arriving in your inbox amid spam and work mail. A character in a fictional weblog sends you instant messages and appears in the comments of a political weblog you also happen to read. This paper is a first mapping of this new field of narrative.

Mapping distributed narratives is not an easy task; it is hard to describe and locate things that are not things but connections. It is difficult to think about distributed narrative. Our languages have developed to name discrete objects. It is far easier to talk about a river or a human than to discuss the system of molecules or cells that make up each of these "things". As Steve Himmer writes of weblogs, "This absence of a discrete, "completed" product makes the weblog as a form resistant to the commoditization either of itself, or of any one particular interpretation." (Himmer 2004) Or, in codework writer and artist Mez Breeze's words:

it seems evident that various web/net/code artists are more likely to be accepted into an academic reification circuit/traditional art market if they produce works that reflect a traditional craft-worker positioning. This "craft" orientation [producing skilled/practically inclined output, rather than placing adequate emphasis on the conceptual or ephemeral aspects of a networked, or code/software-based, medium] is embraced and replicated by artists who create finished, marketable, tangible objects; read: work that slots nicely into a capitalistic framework where products/objects are commodified and hence equated with substantiated worth. (Breeze 2003)

Distributed Narrative Telling Stories Across Networks:

Narrative: The Basics Bronwen Thomas, 2015-11-19 Providing an up to date and accessible overview of the essentials of narrative theory Narrative The Basics guides the reader through the major approaches to the study of narrative using contemporary examples from a wide range of narrative forms to answer key questions including What is narrative What are the universals of narrative What is the relationship between narrative and ideology Does the reader have a role in narrative Has the digital age brought radically new forms of narrative Each chapter introduces key theoretical terms providing thinking points and suggestions for further study With an emphasis on applying theory to example studies it is an ideal introduction to the current study of narrative Internet Research Annual Mia Consalvo, Kate O'Riordan, 2005 This peer reviewed collection represents some of the finest research presented at the 2004 Association of Internet Researchers Conference held in Sussex in 2004 Responding to the theme of ubiquity papers collected here represent a diverse range of inquiries into the development as well as perceived development of the Internet Offering new and important work about blogs online games users norms and access to name just a few topics this collection is a must read for Internet scholars intent on keeping pace with a rapidly expanding field Visual Storytelling in the 21st Century David Callahan, 2024-10-14 This volume will explore varying contemporary strategies and examples of visual storytelling across several contemporary spheres from street art to video games from media for children to media for adults from images in movement to static images It reads these storytelling venues in terms of the ethical itineraries that we live by or would like to live by or wish the world lived by In this sense it relates to the fact that the term narrative has become a ubiquitous shorthand for discursive dominance Observers of widely varying aspects of social life talk for example of changing the narrative claiming the narrative overhauling the narrative or owning the narrative While these general contexts are well known there remains a need to continually interrogate new examples of storytelling forms new cases of the uses of stories in differing formats and new stories in general This perpetual need is what this volume aims to respond to by way of its mixture of contemporary storytelling locations and exemplars Blogging from Egypt Teresa Pepe, 2019-01-03 Six years before the Egyptian revolution of January 2011 many young Egyptians had resorted to blogging as a means of self expression and literary creativity This resulted in the emergence of a new literary genre the autofictional blog Such blogs are explored here as forms of digital literature combining literary analysis and interviews with the authors The blogs analysed give readers a glimpse into the daily lives feelings and aspirations of the Egyptian youth who have pushed the country towards a cultural and political revolution The narratives are also indicative of significant aesthetic and political developments taking place in Arabic literature and culture The Routledge Companion to Narrative Theory Paul Dawson, Maria Mäkelä, 2022-07-18 The Routledge Companion to Narrative Theory brings together top scholars in the field to explore the significance of narrative to pressing social cultural and theoretical issues How does narrative both inform and limit the way we think today From conspiracy theories and social media movements to racial politics and climate change future scenarios the reach is broad This volume is distinctive for addressing the complicated relations between the interdisciplinary narrative turn in the academy and the contemporary boom of instrumental storytelling in the public sphere The scholars collected here explore new theories of causality experientiality and fictionality challenge normative modes of storytelling and offer polemical accounts of narrative fiction nonfiction and video games Drawing upon the latest research in areas from cognitive sciences to complexity theory the volume provides an accessible entry point for those new to the myriad applications of narrative theory and a point of departure for new scholarship Internet Research Annual ,2005 Literature and Social Media

Bronwen Thomas,2020-01-31 From Instapoetry to BookTube contemporary literary cultures and practices are increasingly intertwined with social media In this lively and wide ranging study Bronwen Thomas explores how social media provides new ways of connecting with and rediscovering established literary works and authors while also facilitating the emergence of unique and distinctive forms of creative expression The book takes a 360 approach to the subject combining analysis of current forms and practices with an examination of how social media fosters ongoing collaborative discourse amongst both informal and formal literary networks and demonstrating how the participatory practices of social media have the potential to radically transform how literature is produced shared and circulated The first study of its kind to focus specifically on social media Literature and Social Media provides a timely and engaging account of the state of the art while interrogating the rhetoric that so often accompanies discussion of the new in this context Youth Online Angela A. Thomas,2007 Youth Online chronicles the stories of young people from several countries the US Australia Canada Switzerland and Holland and their interactions in online communities over a seven year period It examines how young people construct their identities in various social contexts social fantasy role playing and for various social purposes leadership learning power rebellion and romance It explores the ways youth are deploying both visual and literary cues to develop a full sense of presence online and to effectively communicate with their peers Using methods of textual visual and socio psychological analysis this book illuminates the ways in which young people are making sense of their own identities and their place within broader communities
