

DIVINE COMMAND THEORY

Divine command theory is a philosophical theory that suggests that morality and ethical behavior are derived from the commands of God or Gods.

OVERVIEW

Divine command theory can be traced back to antiquity when Greek philosophers like Plato pondered whether a higher power had established an absolute moral code. In Christian thought, divine command theory has roots in St Augustine's belief that good deeds are to be performed to obey God's commands rather than personal desire.

KEY CONCEPTS

- God's Sovereignty: God's will is absolute and is the foundation for all moral principles.
- Objective Moral Standards: objective moral standards exist beyond human opinion or cultural relativism.
- Moral Simplicity: every action can be definitively categorized as right or wrong by comparing it against God's commands.

Divine Command Theory And Moral Obligations Tyler Journeaux

Brandon Trey Jackson

Divine Command Theory And Moral Obligations Tyler Journeaux:

God's Command John E. Hare, 2015-10-29 This work focuses on divine command and in particular the theory that what makes something obligatory is that God commands it and what makes something wrong is that God commands us not to do it. Focusing on the Abrahamic faiths, eminent scholar John E. Hare explains that two experiences have had to be integrated. The first is that God tells us to do something or not to do something. The second is that we have to work out ourselves what to do and what not to do. The difficulty has come in establishing the proper relation between them. In Christian reflection on this, two main traditions have emerged: divine command theory and natural law theory. Hare successfully defends a version of divine command theory but also shows that there is considerable overlap with some versions of natural law theory. He engages with a number of Christian theologians, particularly Karl Barth, and extends into a discussion of divine command within Judaism and Islam. The work concludes by examining recent work in evolutionary psychology and argues that thinking of our moral obligations as produced by divine command offers us some help in seeing how a moral conscience could develop in a way that is evolutionarily stable.

Persistent Problems in Modified Divine Command Theory Brandon Trey Jackson, 2017 I argue that there are persistent problems in contemporary modifications of divine command theory. Divine command theory states that God's commands are moral obligations only because he commands them. Modified divine command theories attempt to add to or amend the justification for God's commands being moral obligations. The problem is that they aren't successful at escaping the Euthyphro dilemma, which states: the following of God's commands: they are either a moral obligation because they are commanded by God, or they are commanded by God because they are moral obligations. Modified divine command theories attempt to navigate between these two alternatives but they fail to do so successfully. This becomes evident when we see how these theories solve what I will call the arbitrary worry: the worry that on divine command theory we have no guarantee that God's commands will not be arbitrary or worse, despotic. Two contemporary attempts to modify divine command theory show this to be the case: Robert Adams' Finite and Infinite Goods and Linda Zagzebski's Divine Motivation Theory. Adams solves the worry by positing that God must be loving to issue obligatory commands; however, in doing so, he posits value independent of God, namely the value of relationships and lovingness. Zagzebski solves the worry by positing that God's nature, and thus his motivations, are good, which generate our obligations. However, she identifies goodness only with whatever God's nature happens to be meaning that whatever motivations he is capable of having will generate obligation for us, and we don't know the extent of his nature or what motivations he is capable of having. Adams thus lands on the second horn of the dilemma, and Zagzebski on the first.

The God who Commands Richard J. Mouw, 1990 In this book, Richard Mouw probes from a Calvinist tradition the place of obedience to a divine command. He suggests that a Calvinist perspective on moral theology can profit from an openness to some contemporary developments, particularly narrativist ethics and feminist thought.

This work is an exploration of divine command theory which is the theory that what makes something morally obligatory is that God commands it Divine Command Theory Christopher S. Meyer, 2019 This thesis defend John Danaher s version of the Epistemological Objection to Divine Command Theory DCT This objection asserts that DCT fails as a metaethical theory of moral obligation due to the fact that there is a group of persons reasonable nonbelievers who have knowledge of moral obligations while lacking the knowledge of divine commands required in DCT The first part of this thesis focuses on this objection and explains how it applies to DCT An underlying assumption of Danaher s defense is the existence of reasonable nonbelievers persons who do not violate epistemic duties in their nonbelief The latter portion of this thesis defends the existence of such persons by considering and responding to the challenge that all nonbelievers violate at least one epistemic duty since their nonbelief is the product of the culture in which they are immersed as opposed to rationally informed inquiry In response to this challenge it is shown that the existence of reasonable nonbelievers is the default position and that the burden of proof is on those claiming all nonbelief is unreasonable A Philosophical Analysis of the Divine Command Theory John Williams, 2017 The Excellence of Adams's Modified Divine Command Theory Brian Brown, 2010 William of Ockham's Divine Command Theory Matthew Dee, 2019 There was a long standing consensus that Ockham was a Divine Command Theorist one who holds that all of morality is ultimately grounded in God s commands But contrary to this long standing consensus three arguments have recently surfaced that Ockham is not a divine command theorist The thesis of this dissertation is that contrary to these three arguments Ockham is a divine command theorist The first half of the dissertation is an analysis of the three necessary and jointly sufficient conditions for virtuous action whereas the second half is a response to the three contemporary arguments that Ockham isn t a divine command theorist In a way the first half of the dissertation gives a prima facie case that Ockham is a divine command theorist the second half concludes so ultima facie
