Evaluating Case Conceptualizations in Psychotherapy Reports Kevin Capobianco, 2015 Case conceptualizations are a key component of cognitive behavioural therapy Beck 1995 Persons 2005 Needleman 1999 Despite the theoretical importance of case conceptualizations the question of whether they actually improve therapy outcomes is relatively unexplored Bieling Padesky Kuyken Case Formulation Content Coding Method Eells Kendjelic Lucas 1998 for evaluating case conceptualization quality this project examines these possible inter relations The project involved a trained team of coders rating case conceptualizations found within psychotherapy reports generated at two stages of therapy The first reports coded were written following the completion of the assessment phase of therapy and the later reports were written upon client discharge from therapy In Study 1 the comparative reliabilities in coding achieved across the two methods utilized is discussed as are the strengths and weaknesses in coding and their possible causes Study 2 reports the results obtained upon examining the relationship between case conceptualization quality the therapeutic alliance and treatment outcome Results of Study 2 suggest that for more complicated or impaired client cases therapists produce higher quality conceptualizations at assessment but these generally do not predict therapy outcome or the overall alliance between therapist and client. It was found that the quality of conceptualizations within discharge reports were associated with more positive therapy outcomes. Case conceptualization quality at discharge was also positively associated with the therapeutic alliance.

Case Conceptualization and Treatment Planning Pearl Berman, 1997-06-24

Case conceptualization and treatment planning skills have always been important in providing quality care to clients. These skills are even more vital in today's managed care market for documenting clients' need for treatment and support interventions on brief, intermediate, or long-term bases. This book enables readers to design case conceptualizations and treatment plans from diverse theoretical perspectives including behavioural, cognitive, process, experiential, family systems, dynamic, and transtheoretical. The author also demonstrates how readers can integrate important domains of human complexity into their clinical work so that treatment can be tailored to a particular client. These domains include development, se
