Learning Perspective Benjamin Marlin,2004 Collaborative filtering was initially proposed as a framework for filtering information based on the preferences of users and has since been refined in many different ways This thesis is a comprehensive study of rating based pure non sequential collaborative filtering We analyze existing methods for the task of rating prediction from a machine learning perspective We show that many existing methods proposed for this task are simple applications or modifications of one or more standard machine learning methods for classification regression clustering dimensionality reduction and density estimation We introduce new prediction methods in all of these classes We introduce a new experimental procedure for testing stronger forms of generalization than has been used previously We implement a total of nine prediction methods and conduct large scale prediction accuracy experiments We show interesting new results on the relative performance of these methods Utilizing One-class Collaborative Filtering Using Clustering and Top-K Nearest Neighbor Saman Izadpanah,2015 A New Clustering-Based Collaborative Filtering Recommender System [1],2017
