PROMETHEE aux HUS Eve Benzakine, 2021 Evaluation of Capital Investments at Cliniqua Corporation Vy

Nguyen, California State University San Marcos. College of Science and Mathematics, 2014 Management teams are frequently charged with making informed decisions for valid investments and cost saving ideas for laboratory instruments Cliniqua

Corporation is a research and manufacturing company that produces quality controls and calibrators for a number of in vitro diagnostic instruments The semester in residence project resulted in an organized investment evaluation procedure for management to consider all the relevant factors before committing to an instrument procurement decision Purchasing new equipment can extend the capabilities of the company into additional product lines and strategically target desired customers. It was important to establish an expert system to harvest the knowledge of senior management and to potentially improve on the current evaluation techniques. The research methodology included an evaluation of the current instruments in operation to set a baseline on the previous evaluations and to establish a quantitative ranking system. The sensitivity of the factors required the continuous fine tuning of the analysis tool. The result of the project was a five step evaluation tool with proof of concept pilot testing for the recommendation of instrument investment. The process began with setting constraints based on the needs and requirements that the company can commit to for asset acquisition. Secondly data was collected for the criteria of manufacturer type of analyzer first year introduced to market square footage routine maintenance assay menu capability test throughput ability of being an open channel instrument and continuous runs requirement for mainline water hookups and incremental training required for a routine operator. Then quantitative ranking values 1-10 were applied and compared against the constraints. Third was to calculate the total cost of ownership for qualified instruments. The fourth step was to consider the qualitative factors of instrument usability upholding company reputation customer satisfaction self imposed analyzers for strategic contractual purposes and product line expansion. The last step of the tool was to analyze all the factors involved for the recommendation of new instruments. The pilot testing proposed the purchase of a refurbished Roche cobas e411 Abbott Architect i1000sr or Siemens Advia Centaur CP to meet the company's objectives of maintaining quality products and boosting overall profitability.

P1-24-05 - Serum Vitamin-mineral Profiles U2013 Association with Breast Cancer Risk Including Dietary Patterns and Supplements Use: a Case-control Study Beata Krusinska, 2017

Breast cancer is the most diagnosed cancer among women worldwide. Studies regarding diet and blood levels of vitamins and minerals in the breast cancer aetiology are limited and the results are inconclusive. We investigated the association between serum vitamin mineral profiles (VMPs) and breast cancer (BC) risk with including dietary patterns (DPs) and use of supplements. This case control study involved 420 women aged 40-79 years from north eastern Poland including 190 newly diagnosed breast cancer cases. The serum concentrations of vitamins folate cobalamin 25 OH vitamin D and minerals iron calcium magnesium were marked in 129 post menopausal women 82 controls 47 cases using an immune analyser Cobas e411 and a Cobas Integra 400plus auto analyser Roche Diagnostics respectively. A posteriori VMPs were derived with a Principal Component Analysis (PCA). Three PCA driven DPs: Non Healthy Prudent and Margarine and Sweetened Dairy were described previously. A logistic regression analysis was performed. The odds ratios (ORs) and 95% confidence interval (95% CI) were calculated. Two serum VMPs were identified. The u2018Folate Cobalamin Vitamin Du2019 profile was loaded heavily by the folate factor loading 0.82 cobalamin 0.81 and vitamin D 0.49. The u2018Iron Calcium Du2019 profile was loaded heavily by the iron 0.81 and calcium 0.77. The u2018Magnesium vitamin Du2019 profile was loaded heavily by the magnesium 0.92 and vitamin D 0.39 The risk of BC was lower by 88% OR 0.12 95%CI 0.02-0.88 p < 0.001

Précision du dosage de la progestérone le jour du déclenchement par hCG en fécondation in vitro Simon Colombe, 2019 L'élution de la progestérone le jour du déclenchement de l'ovulation par hCG EP hCG est associée à une diminution du taux de grossesse et est désormais largement utilisée comme seuil de décision en matière de traitement de la fertilité Cependant plusieurs études ont analysé l'impact de l'EP hCG sur les taux de grossesse par FIV avec des résultats contradictoires potentiellement explicables par des valeurs de seuil variées parfois proches du niveau de sensibilité des tests utilisés Nous avons effectué une étude observationnelle portant sur 215 chantillons de sérum de femmes ayant bénéficié d'un transfert d'embryons frais après fécondation in vitro FIV au cours de l'année 2017 Nous avons comparé les niveaux de progestérone sérique obtenus avec l'automate Beckman Coulter Access II ceux obtenus avec l'automate Roche Cobas e411 et la spectrométrie de masse LC MS MS Une importante différence a été observée dans les taux sériques de progestérone mesurés avec les deux essais immunologiques en particulier pour les faibles valeurs de progestérone et entre un automate et la spectrométrie de masse

Dans les concentrations de progestérone allant jusqu'à 3 ng/mL le coefficient de corrélation entre les deux automates était de 0,723. La pente de la droite de régression montrait des valeurs moyennes supérieures de 19% avec le Beckman Coulter Access II par rapport au Roche Cobas e411 et des valeurs supérieures de plus de 30% pour les concentrations basses de progestérone. Les taux de progestérone sont cliniquement cruciaux et les différences de résultats retrouvés entre les automates peuvent impliquer des décisions incorrectes dans la gestion d'une FIV.
