Hai-Jew, Shalin, 2014-09-30. In light of the expensive nature of quantitative research such as experiments, researchers must seek other methods of understanding the world around them. As such, new qualitative methods are gaining ground in the modern research community. Enhancing Qualitative and Mixed Methods Research with Technology explores the integration of new digital tools into the research process. Including current information on data visualization, research design, information capture as well as social media analysis, this publication serves as an ideal reference source for academicians, scientists, information specialists, business managers and upper level students involved in interdisciplinary research.

Cosmopolitanism, Markets, and Consumption Julie Emontspool, Ian Woodward, 2017-12-13. This book addresses the complicated question of how markets and consumption create the possibilities for cross cultural exchanges and the multicultural pleasures of omnivorous consumption whilst at the same time building new boundaries and distinctions.

paving the way for new exploitative relationships and initiating novel modes of status and capital accumulation The contributors identify that the divide between the economic and ethical dimensions of globalisation has never seemed in sharper relief With the workings of global markets at odds with fostering cosmopolitan social change this collection addresses the question of whether we should assume that market logics and consumptive practices conflict with cosmopolitan agendas It also explores whether the imperatives of economic globalisation and individual consumption practices are opposed to cosmopolitan prospects for global solidarities Cosmopolitanism Markets and Consumption will be of interest to students and scholars across a range of disciplines including in the social sciences businesses and marketing studies
