Factor	Effect on rate	Diagram	Rate of reaction	Rate of reaction
Temperature	Increases		Rate of reaction increases	Rate of reaction increases
Concentration	Increases		Rate of reaction increases	Rate of reaction increases

1. Temperature: The rate of reaction increases with an increase in temperature. This is because the molecules have more kinetic energy and move faster, leading to more frequent collisions. The rate of reaction is directly proportional to the temperature.

2. Concentration: The rate of reaction increases with an increase in the concentration of the reactants. This is because there are more molecules in a given volume, leading to more frequent collisions. The rate of reaction is directly proportional to the concentration of the reactants.

3. Surface Area: The rate of reaction increases with an increase in the surface area of the reactants. This is because there are more molecules exposed to the other reactant, leading to more frequent collisions. The rate of reaction is directly proportional to the surface area of the reactants.

4. Catalyst: A catalyst is a substance that speeds up a chemical reaction without being consumed in the process. It works by providing an alternative pathway for the reaction with a lower activation energy. The rate of reaction is directly proportional to the concentration of the catalyst.

5. Pressure: The rate of reaction increases with an increase in pressure for reactions involving gases. This is because the molecules are packed closer together, leading to more frequent collisions. The rate of reaction is directly proportional to the pressure of the gases.

6. Light: The rate of reaction increases with an increase in light intensity for reactions that are initiated by light. This is because the light provides the energy needed to break the bonds in the reactants, leading to more frequent collisions. The rate of reaction is directly proportional to the intensity of the light.

7. Solvent: The rate of reaction increases with an increase in the polarity of the solvent for reactions involving ionic reactants. This is because the solvent molecules help to break the bonds in the reactants, leading to more frequent collisions. The rate of reaction is directly proportional to the polarity of the solvent.

8. pH: The rate of reaction increases with an increase in pH for reactions involving acidic reactants. This is because the higher pH indicates a higher concentration of hydroxide ions, which help to break the bonds in the reactants, leading to more frequent collisions. The rate of reaction is directly proportional to the pH of the solution.
