Explaining Contemporary Asian Military Modernization Sheryn Lee, 2021-04-20 This book proposes a novel theoretical framework of interactive arming in order to explain armament dynamics in contemporary Asia Frequently the modernisation of contemporary naval forces in Asia is described as an arms race with the underlying assumption being that weapons acquisitions and increases in defence expenditure are competitive and bilateral and due to conflicting purposes or mutual fears This book argues that the concept of an arms race is an unsuitable one for explaining contemporary military modernisation in 21st century Asia Instead it proposes a novel and innovative concept of interactive arming and argues that what drives conflict is political rivalry not weapons acquisitions Instead of perceiving arming as abnormal behaviour the book views arming as a natural strategic behaviour of states and military modernisation as a basic requirement for a state s ability to survive This book will be of much interest to students of Asian security strategic studies and international relations in general

The Evolving Maritime Balance of Power in the Asia-Pacific Lawrence W. Prabhakar, Joshua Ho, Walter Samuel Grono Bateman, 2006 The Asia Pacific region has emerged as the hub of global geo political geo economic and geo strategic significance in the post Cold War period The rise of China and the resurgence of India will be the hallmark for the next 50 years How this surge in power is accommodated by the incumbent powers like the United States and Japan and how the new regional powers like China and India manage the power politics that emerge will be the key determinants of regional stability This volume examines the national maritime doctrines as well as the nuclear weapons developments at sea of the four major powers in the Asia Pacific namely China India Japan and the United States to see if the evolving dynamic is a cooperative or a competitive one In particular the volume looks at the evolving paradigms of maritime transformation in strategy and technology the emergent new maritime doctrines and evolving force postures in the

The U.S Rebalance and the Asia-Pacific Region Centre for Public Policy Research, Centre for Strategic Studies, Given the strategic emergence of the Asia Pacific region there has been a significant rethinking on the need to develop and strengthen relationships within the region and also with the United States Therefore it becomes important to analyze how the regional powers will position themselves vis a vis the United States and how they would respond to the rebalancing initiative CPPR Centre for Strategic Studies provided a platform for prominent strategists think tank analysts leading experts and academicians to discuss debate and map the future US role in the Asia Pacific in its 2 day international conference on U S Rebalance and the Asia Pacific region

The Asia-Pacific Rebalance Naval Postgraduate Naval Postgraduate School, 2014-12-02 This book analyzes the development of the Asia Pacific rebalance and its possible effects on United States naval strategy over the next several decades The goal is to develop a better understanding of the Asian rebalance in order to improve future strategic choices governing the employment of the United States Navy in Asia It argues that the Asia Pacific rebalance and its effects continue to emphasize the importance of the U S Navy due to the increasing importance of U S economic political and security interests regionally In conjunction with increasing regional threats from China and North Korea as well as non traditional threats such as climate change or terrorism the importance of U S naval presence and its interaction regionally will continue to be pivotal to future U S policy in the region To accomplish this analysis it is necessary to describe the development of modern U S naval strategy the historic involvement and role of the United States Navy in the Asia Pacific and what the Navy has done substantively to integrate with the new strategy and how current policy choices can affect future U S naval objectives Examining several different future scenarios and U S security policy goals in the Asia Pacific it will briefly look at costs and benefits of each situation with specific focus on the naval missions of conventional deterrence and the prevention of regional conflict as well as its impact on regional confidence building measures and the Navy s ability to assist in humanitarian disaster relief operations It concludes that the United States Navy can continue to adapt to the desired policy goals as set forth by the Asia Pacific rebalance It can achieve success through an increased prioritization of resources to the Asia Pacific increased political sustainability of U S naval forward presence in the region and to develop a new U S maritime strategy that reflects new geo strategic realities

Asia-Pacific David Lai, 2013 Dr David Lai provides a timely assessment of the geostrategic significance of Asia Pacific His monograph is also a thought provoking analysis of the U S strategic shift toward the region and its implications Dr Lai judiciously offers the following key points First Asia Pacific which covers China Northeast Asia and Southeast Asia is a region with complex currents On the one hand there is an unabated region wide drive for economic development that has been pushing Asia Pacific forward for decades On the other this region is troubled with aside from many other conflicts unsettled maritime disputes that have the potential to trigger wars between and among Asia Pacific nations Second on top of these mixed currents China and the United States compete intensely over a wide range of vital interests in this region For better or for worse the U S China relationship is becoming a defining factor in the relations among the Asia Pacific nations Third the U S strategic shift toward Asia Pacific is as President Obama puts it not a choice but a necessity Although conflicts elsewhere especially the ones in the Middle East continue to draw U S attention and consume U S foreign policy resources the United States is turning its focus toward China and Asia Pacific Fourth in the mid 2000s the United States and China made an unprecedented strategic goodwill exchange and agreed to blaze a new path out of the tragedy that often attends great power transition Fifth at this time of U S strategic reorientation and military rebalancing toward Asia Pacific the most dangerous consideration is that Asia Pacific nations having disputes with China can misread U S strategic intentions and overplay the U S card to pursue their territorial interests and challenge China Finally territorial dispute is becoming an urgent issue in the Asia Pacific

The American "Pivot" to Asia. Military and Political Challenges and Implications for the US and Pacific-Asia Christian Rucker, 2016-04-26 Seminar paper from the year 2015 in the subject Politics Political systems in general and in comparison grade 1 3 Friedrich Alexander University Erlangen Nuremberg Institut f r Politische Wissenschaft course Mastercourse American Conflict and Crisis Management in the 21st Century language English abstract This paper aims to approach the subject of reorientation of the US foreign policy regarding the Pacific region Priority will be set on military and alliance policy factors of main parties involved first and foremost the USA Moreover the issues of the strategy of reorientation in itself and problems that are involved will be addressed In addition the following will be discussed characteristics and implementation options and the question of relevance as to how this reorientation towards Asia means neglecting other regions like the Near East and how the U S are to bring their global claim of validity in conformity with it Tthe US have a strong presence of seaborne airborne and ground based facilities numerous military materials as well as personnel are stationed in the state of Hawaii Alaska and Guam This includes troop concentrations in allied countries such as South Korea and Japan but also a rotating stationing of troops in some other partner countries within Pacific Asia such as the Philippines and Australia For some time past the USA have been turning towards the region of Southeast Asia and they are beginning to expand their political economical and military engagement in this region of the world There are diverse reasons for this such as an opening of new rising markets and the development of political and economical relations to significant emerging countries and perhaps future industrialized countries of the 21st century Another reason is China s ascent as an important player regarding international relations which are significant to the US as well as to future relations of both countries The Changing Maritime Scene in Asia Geoffrey Till, 2016-04-29 Is naval conflict in the Asia Pacific region becoming more likely On the face of it this seems likely nearly all countries in the region are rapidly modernising their navies and expanding their maritime capabilities at a time of increasingly rancorous disputes over sovereignty This is especially the case in the East and South China Seas with their supply of fish and largely untapped resources in oil and gas Across the region there is a growing recognition of the economic importance of the sea both for its resources and for the crucial shipping it facilitates But economic growth goes both ways developing increasing interdependence between the countries of the region Expanding trade is subject to serious threats from pirates drug smugglers and other forms of maritime crime and navies and coastguards are coming together to combat them Which will prevail the tendency to compete or the tendency to cooperate In reviewing the maritime policies of the major countries of the region this volume aims to answer this question Assessing the Asia-Pacific Rebalance David J. Berteau, Michael J. Green, Zack Cooper, 2014-12-22 This report seeks to clarify the stated objectives of the US rebalance strategy reviewing regional responses and assessing the status of the rebalance which is critical to reinforcing regional stability by strengthening US relationships presence and capabilities The authors evaluate both public statements and visible implementation of the rebalance strategy as viewed not only from Washington but from regional capitals as well

Asia-Pacific David Lai, 2013 This monograph provides a timely assessment of the geostrategic significance of Asia Pacific and offers as a thought provoking analysis of the U S strategic shift toward the region and its implications with several key points First Asia Pacific which covers China Northeast Asia and Southeast Asia is a region with complex currents On the one hand there is an unabated region wide drive for economic development that has been pushing Asia Pacific forward for decades On the other this region is troubled with aside from many other conflicts unsettled maritime disputes that have the potential to trigger wars between and among Asia Pacific nations Second on top of these mixed currents China and the United States compete intensely over a wide range of vital interests in this region For better or for worse the U S China relationship is becoming a defining factor in the relations among the Asia Pacific nations Third the U S strategic shift toward Asia Pacific is as President Obama puts it not a choice but a necessity Although conflicts elsewhere especially the ones in the Middle East continue to draw U S attention and consume U S foreign policy resources the United States is turning its focus toward China and Asia Pacific Fourth in the mid 2000s the United States and China made an unprecedented strategic goodwill exchange and agreed to blaze a new path out of the tragedy that often attends great power transition Fifth at this time of U S strategic reorientation and military rebalancing toward Asia Pacific the most dangerous consideration is that Asia Pacific nations having disputes with China can misread U S strategic intentions and overplay the U S card to pursue their territorial interests and challenge China Finally territorial dispute is becoming an urgent issue in the Asia Pacific

Asia-Pacific U. S. Army, Strategic Studies Institute (SSI), Director of National Intelligence, Central Intelligence Agency

(CIA), U. S. Government, 2017-05-04 This Strategic Studies Institute paper provides a timely assessment of the geostrategic significance of Asia Pacific. The monograph is also a thought provoking analysis of the U S strategic shift toward the region and its implications. The author judiciously offers the following key points: First, Asia Pacific, which covers China, Northeast Asia, and Southeast Asia, is a region with complex currents. On the one hand, there is an unabated region wide drive for economic development that has been pushing Asia Pacific forward for decades. On the other, this region is troubled with, aside from many other conflicts, unsettled maritime disputes that have the potential to trigger wars between and among Asia Pacific nations. Second, on top of these mixed currents, China and the United States compete intensely over a wide range of vital interests in this region. For better or for worse, the U S China relationship is becoming a defining factor in the relations among the Asia Pacific nations. It is complicating the prospects for peace and the risks of conflict in this region, conditioning the calculation of national policies among Asia Pacific nations, and to a gradual extent influencing the future of global international relations. Third, the U S strategic shift toward Asia Pacific is, as President Obama puts it, not a choice but a necessity. Although conflicts elsewhere, especially the ones in the Middle East, continue to draw U S attention and consume U S foreign policy resources, the United States is turning its attention to China and Asia Pacific. Fourth, in the mid 2000s, the United States and China made an unprecedented strategic goodwill exchange and agreed to blaze a new path out of the tragedy that often attends great power transition. It was a giant step in the right direction. However, it did not set U S China relations forever. The two great powers can still encroach upon each other's core interests and overreact to each other's moves. In addition, the United States is also indirectly and deeply involved in many of China's disputes with its neighbors. These conflicts could lead China and the United States into unwanted wars. In addition to the China paper, this unique collection of American military documents provides a special view of recent Chinese military and policy developments.

Asia-Pacific David Lai, 2013. This monograph provides a timely assessment of the geostrategic significance of Asia Pacific and offers as a thought provoking analysis of the U S strategic shift toward the region and its implications with several key points: First, Asia Pacific, which covers China, Northeast Asia, and Southeast Asia, is a region with complex currents. On the one hand, there is an unabated region wide drive for economic development that has been pushing Asia Pacific forward for decades. On the other, this region is troubled with, aside from many other conflicts, unsettled maritime disputes that have the potential to trigger wars between and among Asia Pacific nations Second on top of these mixed currents China and the United States compete intensely over a wide range of vital interests in this region For better or for worse the U S China relationship is becoming a defining factor in the relations among the Asia Pacific nations Third the U S strategic shift toward Asia Pacific is as President Obama puts it not a choice but a necessity Although conflicts elsewhere especially the ones in the Middle East continue to draw U S attention and consume U S foreign policy resources the United States is turning its focus toward China and Asia Pacific Fourth in the mid 2000s the United States and China made an unprecedented strategic goodwill exchange and agreed to blaze a new path out of the tragedy that often attends great power transition Fifth at this time of U S strategic reorientation and military rebalancing toward Asia Pacific the most dangerous consideration is that Asia Pacific nations having disputes with China can misread U S strategic intentions and overplay the U S card to pursue their territorial interests and challenge China Finally territorial dispute is becoming an urgent issue in the Asia Pacific

The Evolution of US Maritime Power in the Pacific Edward A. Olsen, 1992 This analysis examines the evolving contexts of U S maritime power in the Asia Pacific region It assesses its historical growth changes as the result of major geopolitical shifts and the impact of both the Cold War and Post Cold War periods Special emphasis is put on the ways the Post Cold War era is affecting and may influence U S strategy generally and with special reference to naval power It also examines the way in which Asian maritime power affects the geopolitical circumstances of the region and in turn the United States strategy in the region

Asia & the Pacific Paul Daniel Taylor, 2001 Carl von Clausewitz taught that anyone who plans strategy before he has achieved a clear definition of policy goals puts d%the cart before the horse It is equally true that it makes no sense for a country to try to develop its forces or plan operations without taking account of the unique characteristics that define and shape its potential adversaries and available allies For these reasons we at the Naval War College have placed special emphasis on understanding the Asia Pacific region The economic political and demographic dynamics of that area make clear its importance to achieving global U S objectives At the same time continued tensions related to the Korean Peninsula issues between China and Taiwan and between India and Pakistan as well as unrest within Indonesia underscore important threats to stability in the region Its vast territory and expanses of ocean make the Asia Pacific region fundamental a maritime theater and the U S Navy a central player in any military operations that defend the interests of the United States The Asia Pacific Forum from which the papers that follow are taken brought together a distinguished collection of scholars and policy practitioners to examine the political economic and military realities of the Asia Pacific region in the context of the U S strategic tradition They proved that familiar military thinking about some important questions might have become obsolete

Maritime Security in the Indian Ocean and Western Pacific Howard M. Hensel, Amit Gupta, 2017-11-28 Scholars and policy makers have traditionally viewed portions of the Indian Ocean and the Western Pacific as separate and discrete political economic and military regions In recent years however a variety of economic political and military forces have made many within the academic community as well as a growing number of national governmental leaders change their perceptions and recognize that these maritime expanses are one zone of global interaction. Consequently, political, military, and economic developments in one maritime region increasingly have an impact elsewhere. Analyzing and assessing the contemporary maritime challenges in the Indian Ocean and the Western Pacific, this valuable study highlights the current prospects for peace and security in what is rapidly becoming recognized as an integrated and interactive political, military, strategic, and economic environment. This work will be of interest to researchers and policy makers involved in regional studies as well as security studies, conflict resolution, military, and peace studies.

The New US Strategy towards Asia William T. Tow, Douglas Stuart, 2014-12-17 Barack Obama's rebalancing or pivot strategy intended to demonstrate continued US commitment to the Asia Pacific region in a variety of military, economic, and diplomatic contexts was launched with much fanfare in 2011. Implicit in the new strategy is both a focus on China engagement with and containment of and a heavy reliance by the United States on its existing friends and allies in the region in order to implement its strategy. This book explores the impact of the new strategy on America's regional friends and allies. It shows how these governments are working with Washington to advance and protect their distinct national interests while at the same time avoiding any direct confrontation with China. It also addresses the reasons why many of these regional actors harbour concerns about the ability of the US to sustain the pivot strategy in the long run. Overall, the book illustrates the deep complexities of the United States exercise of power and influence in the region.

The American Factor in the Evolution of China's Maritime Doctrine - Covering Chinese Maritime and PRC Naval History, Imperialism, Cold War, Sino-Soviet, Islands, Cultural Revolution, and Vietnam U. S. Military, Department of Defense (DoD), U. S. Government, 2017-10-22 Since the birth of the People's Republic of China (PRC) in 1949, American military strategy, foreign policy, and naval presence in East Asia have all had a significant effect on the evolution of China's naval development strategy and maritime doctrine. This thesis will explore the roles, direct and indirect, the United States has played in the development of China's maritime doctrine. China is quickly becoming a regional maritime power and will continue to be a significant factor in the strategic equation of the Western Pacific. The commonly held perception that China is primarily a continental power is no longer true as the Chinese navy and merchant marine fleet are today among the largest in the world. As China's national interests expand beyond the Asia Pacific region, understanding the natural maritime component of those interests will be necessary in the evaluation of China's global aspirations and national strength. This research will be relevant in the assessment of China's maritime doctrine in the 1990s and will allow planners of the Asia Pacific region to better understand China's often pragmatic approach to naval development and strategy. It will be up to the planners and strategists alike to build on this study and make their own interpretations and applications to policy making as the future unfolds.
