Reading Practices with Deaf Learners Patricia L. McAnally, Susan Rose, Stephen Patrick Quigley, 2007
This book was written specifically for professors and college students in teacher training programs for deaf education and for classroom teachers working with deaf and hard of hearing learners. It is one of the very few books on the market that focuses entirely on the hearing impaired. It consists of three sections, each one providing in-depth information on topics critical to the teaching of reading to this specific population. Section one, Foundations, contains chapters dealing with theory and research in such topics as cognition, reading, language, literary development, vocabulary, and comprehension. One chapter on ASL, English, and Reading looks at the research in the area of second language learners and discusses its application to deaf and hard of hearing students. Section two, Instructional Management, deals with instructional management and describes instructional systems and designs. These chapters look at current trends in education and how these trends apply to the education of students who are deaf and hard of hearing. Section three, Applications, focuses on specific instructional models in reading, writing, and spelling, detailing strategies that have been successfully used with deaf and hard of hearing learners. The last chapter in this section discusses assessment, giving information and examples of both formal and authentic procedures.

Handbook of Reading Disability Research Anne McGill-Franzen, Richard Allington, 2010-09-17
Bringing together a wide range of research on reading disabilities, this comprehensive Handbook extends current discussion and thinking beyond a narrowly defined psychometric perspective. Emphasizing that learning to read proficiently is a long-term developmental process involving many interventions of various kinds, all keyed to individual developmental needs, it addresses traditional questions: What is the nature or causes of reading disabilities? How are reading disabilities assessed? How should reading disabilities be remediated? To what extent is remediation possible, but from multiple or alternative perspectives? Taking incursions into the broader research literature represented by linguistic and anthropological paradigms, as well as psychological and educational research, the volume is on the front line in exploring the relation of reading disability to learning and language, to poverty and prejudice, and to instruction and schooling. The editors and authors are distinguished scholars with extensive research experience and publication records and numerous honors and awards from professional organizations representing the range of disciplines in the field of reading disabilities. Throughout, their contributions are contextualized within the framework of educators struggling to develop concrete instructional practices that meet the learning needs of the lowest achieving readers. Teaching English to Deaf and Second-language Students, 1986
