As a consequence, all 120,000 people who lived in the city in 1990 were asked what they would do if they had to leave their homes. The survey found that 60% of the people would leave their homes if they had to. This was a very high percentage, and it was a very important finding. It showed that the people of the city were very concerned about the future of their city, and they were willing to take action to protect it. This was a very important finding, and it was a very important step in the process of creating a disaster preparedness plan for the city.
