have guides and journal lists The influence of cathodic protection on erosion-corrosion of metals and model alloys Mark E. Orazem,1988 The object of this program is to develop a fundamental understanding of the influence of applied potential on mechanisms for erosion corrosion as applied to copper and copper based alloys This work is intended to allow application of laboratory experiments to predict the onset of erosion corrosion failure under field conditions and to guide development of workable strategies for prevention of erosion corrosion This program is being transferred to the University of Florida therefore this report provides a summary of the activities at the University of Virginia In the first year of the program an electrochemical cell incorporating a scanning ellipsometer was designed and built The cell uses a submerged electrolyte jet impinging on an electrode The laser spot size is around 25 x 70 micro meters and the position of the electrode jet assembly relative to the laser spot can be controlled by stepping motor stages without altering the hydrodynamic environment jes
