Mechanical Design for the Stage Alan Hendrickson, 2012-09-10 Scenic effects involving rotating turntables tracking stage wagons and the vertical movement of curtains and painted drops have become common in both Broadway and Regional theatre productions The machines that drive these effects range from small pneumatic cylinders pushing loads of a few pounds an inch or two to 40 horsepower winches running multi ton scenery at speeds 6 feet per second or more Usually this machinery is designed by theatre technicians specifically for a particular show s effect Compared to general industry this design process is short often only a few days long it is done by one person design teams are rare and it is done in the absence of reference material specifically addressing the issues involved The main goal of this book is to remedy this last situation Mechanical Design for the Stage will be a reference for you that will provide the basic engineering formulas needed to predict the forces torques speeds and power required by a given move give a technician a design process to follow which will direct their work from general concepts to specific detail as a design evolves and show many examples of traditional stage machinery designs The book s emphasis will be on following standard engineering design and construction practices and developing machines that are functional efficient to build easily maintained and safe to use

Department of the Army, 1954 Applied forest management for tropical and subtropical plantations William Ladrach, 2013-01-01 Global demand for forest products is increasing daily This implies an incremental pressure on tropical and subtropical forests to supply wood products Natural forests continue to supply wood although their capacity is decreasing steadily We are depending more and more on forest plantations to satisfy industrial needs for solid wood as well as pulpwood Fortunately the warm climates have an enormous potential to produce wood fiber when the production is based on applied science By selecting the appropriate species for given sites and the use of the principles of silviculture and genetic improvement tree plantations can often produce more than 50 m³ ha year

Because of their capacity for rapid growth the tropical and subtropical regions have a great advantage over the temperate regions William Ladrach has dedicated more than 40 years to the research and management of forest plantations in various parts of the world principally in Central and South America This book Applied Forest Management for Tropical and Subtropical Plantations provides a guide to future forest production It is a guide to applied forestry and covers subjects from viewpoints of the biological ecological economic and industrial sciences This work is of great value to foresters students industrial managers researchers and others who work in equatorial countries It will have a strong and positive impact on the establishment of tree plantations during the coming decades
